Vintage Report

BAR de la POSTE LADERIE CREPERIE TERRASSE It may have been a year of contrasts in Bordeaux, but the 2021 vintage is an exciting one to buy now. Whilst global events added an extra layer of complexity and stress for many producers, the weather was equally unpredictable. After the warmer years of 2018–20, this was overall a more 'traditional' Bordeaux harvest.

Key Points

• Frost and mildew drove quantity down • But a warm, dry end to the growing season ensured good quality fruit • Overall, a difficult harvest; but some fantastic wines still to be found

Spring

A warm winter was followed by a distinctly chilly April - with temperatures dropping well below freezing in key regions. This had a devastating impact on many vineyards across Bordeaux just as buds were beginning to break. Producers in the Médoc were able to use 'candles' to drive back the frost and preserve vines, but not all were so lucky. This was then followed by a very damp May and June - with mildew entering the picture.

Summer

to propel ripeness.

Autumn

The hotter months of the year effectively saved the vintage, however. July remained resolutely cool and cloudy, but moving into August and then September the weather fared much better. A warm, dry growing season helped develop the grapes, giving some much needed energy

Picking was often left as late as possible to take full advantage of the better weather and to allow the grapes to reach full ripeness. With quantities down following the challenges earlier in the season, vineyards were able to focus their attention and energy across a smaller area. The later the picking, however, the greater the likelihood of rot, or botrytis - something many wineries encountered.

Overview of Bordeaux

Key Regions

1. Saint-Estèphe

At the northern tip of the Médoc, and with some of the wine world's most famous names as neighbours, Saint-Estèphe wines can develop beautifully given time – and reward the savvy buyer.

2. Pauillac

Nestled in the Left Bank between Saint-Estèphe and Saint-Julien, Pauillac is a must-have for any Bordeaux collector. It has three of the top-five châteaux in the 1855 Médoc Classification and a legendary reputation.

3. Saint-Julien

A go-to for many, Saint-Julien is smaller than its three Médoc neighbours – but should not be overlooked. A hallmark for consistency and quality, it often offers some enviable value-for-money credentials.

4. Margaux

Margaux is home to some of Haut-Médoc's most famous wines. The 1855 Bordeaux Classification saw 21 properties granted cru classé status – more than any other Left Bank appellation. Today, Margaux continues to produce elegant wines of excellent quality. Like the majority of Bordeaux's Médoc, Cabernet Sauvignon dominates blends.

5. Pomerol

Pomerol contains many small estates producing supple, approachable wines primarily made using Merlot. Pomerol's wines are as esteemed as the grand Left Bank châteaux.

6. Saint-Émilion

Saint-Émilion produces the finest expressions of Merlot. With its 82 classed growths, Saint-Émilion is as iconic as it is beautiful.

7. Pessac-Léognan

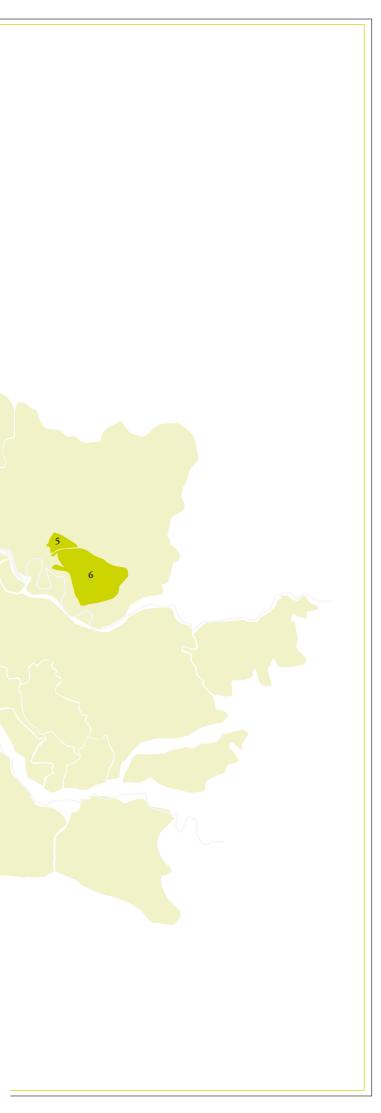

From the northern part of the Graves area. The region is as famous for its whites as its reds – and offers a really excellent variety to be explored.

Why Bordeaux?

Bordeaux is the origin of En Primeur – with wines bought and sold in this way for generations. The character and quality of the vintages produced in this corner of France arguably lend themselves to ageing more than anywhere in the world. It's the perfect place to begin your cellar. The Bordeaux 'En Primeur week' is now an annual event which attracts tasters, buyers and critics from around the globe. Taking place in the spring following the harvest, wine allocations can be a difficult negotiation. That's why having both an expert buyer, on the ground, and key trusted relationships can be key.

At Majestic, Bordeaux has been a key category for over 40 years – with some of our longestrunning stocked wines and supplier relationships coming in this area. There's a host of customer favourites in our En Primeur offering, all secured by our award-winning buying team, who tasted over 200 different wines for the 2021 vintage alone.

My Bordeaux 2021 Impressions

During my week in Bordeaux for En Primeur, the 2021 vintage was referred to as "a classic vintage": great terroir has produced great wines and each wine has a nice expression of its place. For winemakers and wineries, it was a vintage of decisions, and for consumers "a vintage for drinkers not speculators".

The myriad of viticultural challenges created by the adverse weather of Vintage 2021 in Bordeaux gave winemakers both quantity and quality challenges across the region. Great advances in winemaking techniques and technology – as well as many newly built, industry-leading wineries – have allowed winemakers and wineries to navigate this vintage phenomenally well, making fantastic wines full of freshness, elegance and precision.

This vintage was referred to as "classic" many times during the trip – which equates to normal alcohol levels (13–13.5%), wines that are delicate and elegant, less extraction, more finesse and precision, and great balance and freshness.

In most cases, this was the vintage of the Cabernet. As Merlot is an early-flowering grape, it was heavily impacted by frost which affected final yields. Cabernet Sauvignon, and the increasingly popular Cabernet Franc, will be seen with much higher percentages in Vintage 2021. One of the most important decisions was when to pick the grapes – and how late to risk leaving it. Those that persevered and waited have come out of top – the key was to get the Cabernet Sauvignon grape to optimum ripeness and maturity. Many producers left Cabernets on their vines until the middle of October.

To summarise, there are variations on quality, with some regrettable lows, but there are some exceptional highs, where the winemakers, wineries and terroir have been able to produce fantastic quality wines. For those that shone, the 2021 vintage is about elegant and precise wines, fresh acidity, purity and density of fruit, lower alcohol, balance and drinkability.

Following on from the three warm and sunny vintages of 2018–20 in Bordeaux, the 2021 vintage was always going to have some tough acts to follow. However, with its freshness, precision, drinkability and poise, I truly believe it will find its place.

Saint-Estèphe

At Château Calon-Ségur, just north of the village of Saint-Estèphe, the early season frost stayed away, but the winery still made key decisions late in the season to find their 2021 expression. The wines were picked at a lower abv, with more acidity - and more Cabernet Sauvignon in the blend. Picking went right up until 14th October to ensure that ripeness, which has really paid off.

Further east, and closer to the Gironde, Château Montrose was also protected from frost by the microclimate the river creates. Again, Cabernet was key here to the creation of a blend which championed ripeness and vibrancy.

For Château Cos d'Estournel, their 55-year-old vines weathered the conditions well - creating a vintage Michel Reybier, the winery's owner, described as one of "humility and precision". These understated blends will benefit from their 55% new-oak barrels, which will give a roundness and complexity to the finished product. Overall, another key region to watch and back.

Pauillac

In Pauillac, as in Margaux, late picking and a focus on Cabernet Sauvignon ripeness led to some exciting wines in 2021.

For Carruades de Lafite, for instance, the challenge of the vintage was met with a meticulous attention to detail - showing "the true face" of the wine

At Château Batailley – founded in the 16th century and a Majestic customer favourite – the picking was incredibly late, running from 11th to 15th October. I was blown away with the length and ripeness of the tannins this created. Château Mouton Rothschild used alert, responsive pickers – at a relentless pace – to bring in a healthy, mature crop. Château Pontet-Canet described it as a "vintage requiring great attention", picking plot by plot over a longer period.

Château Duhart-Milon went a step further, even describing their wines as a true "rediscovery" of Duhart and a "best of both worlds" vintage. The northerly Château Lafite Rothschild believe the key to 2021 is judicial lack of oak, describing it as a "vintage of decisions" and not one for "big extraction or new oak". More indications of an 'old school' approach which I think many will enjoy.

Overall, the approach by all the wineries we've selected was incredible to see. Their dedication and forensic detail has created wines which were compelling to taste - and I would urge you to explore.

The 2021 vintage shows a return to the classic equilibrium of vintages from a generation ago, yielding fresh, well-balanced and well-structured wines that will reveal their full complexity with time,

Saint-Julien

Another year which showed the excellence and consistency of this appellation. At Château Langoa-Barton the wines show typical Saint-Julien elegance and power, aided by a higher Cabernet percentage. 'Power' was certainly a word which came to mind at Château Léoville Barton, where these dark, inky, brambly wines will sing following a period in 60% new oak barrels. It was a similar story at the stunning Château Beychevelle where the words in my notebook registered "precision, elegance, freshness, delicacy, silkiness, fruitiness". Everything I was hoping to see.

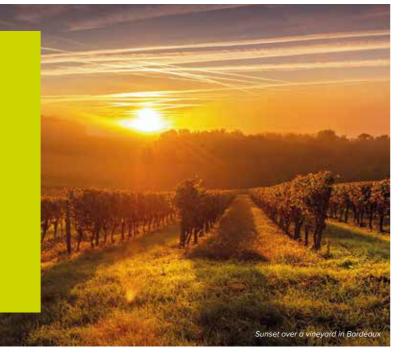

Château Branaire-Ducru have toned the power down somewhat on the previous three vintages, producing a wine which is ripe, fresh and with a lovely texture. The Petit Verdot in the blend does add that extra grip. Similarly, the high percentage of Cabernet Sauvignon at Château Léoville Las Cases will be exciting to see following a period of ageing in 85% new oak

Meanwhile at Bordeaux 'rising star' Château Léoville Poyferré, the winery is noticeably shifting towards letting the vintage take them to a 'fresher', elegant expression by "trusting their instincts".

Overall – whichever side of the power-balance side the wineries stood on - there was a really impressive emphasis on careful guidance and selection. These are wines which will really impress a variety of palates.

The 2021 vintage is less exuberant and with greater tension on the palate than the 18/19/20 trilogy. It's a fresher style vintage – letting ourselves be captivated by its purity of fruit and elegance. A classic Bordeaux vintage, which echoes the 2012 in style and easy-drinking approach,

Margaux

Margaux is the largest commune in the Médoc, and certainly one of the most iconic. Here, late picking and careful fruit selection has created some really exciting wines.

Château Brane-Cantenac, for instance, has made excellent use of gentle fruit extraction to give great structure. Whilst Château d'Issan, an estate with a history dating back to the 12th century, harvested as late as 9th October – and described the vintage as "excellent for Cabernet Sauvignon and akin to 2014". Both ones to watch.

Meanwhile at Château Margaux, a winery which needs little introduction, it was the density of the vintage and the comparisons to 2019 which really stood out. I expect these will be hotly snapped up. At local neighbour Château Palmer the wines "harked back to the 20th century" with a focus on moderation and harmony.

Finally, at Château Rauzan-Ségla I was deeply impressed by the balance of the wines – with the ripeness of their Cabernet clearly carefully monitored. Overall, I am confident that the 2021 vintage in Margaux has some superb wines to back, particularly after such an encouraging tasting.

For us, 2021 offers exceptionally fulfilled wines, rooted in moderation and harmony, harking back to the vintages of the previous century. Picking late saved wines and the trick was waiting between picking Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon,

The 2021 vintage achieves a balance of fruit and floral notes which is simply astounding. The balance is razor-sharp, sublimated by Cabernet Sauvignon harvested at absolutely perfect ripeness.

Pomerol

The key to great wines on Bordeaux's Right Bank, in this year as much as ever, was the careful balance between terroir, blend and conditions.

At Château L'Evangile the gravel-clay soils ensured a balance between free draining and water retention - ensuring aromatic freshness. This was particularly prevalent in the Cabernet Franc present (an all-time high in their blend at 30%). For Château La Conseillante it came down to "snap decision making". They went to extreme lengths, lighting over 4,000 candles to protect against frost on 7th April, in order to make a wine which "fills us with great pride".

At the 18.7 hectare vineyard of Château La Fleur-Pétrus, it was again the gravel-based soils which helped to moderate.

This is an area which is generally going to be earlier drinking, and wines which I am sure will be highly enjoyable to discover. It's a region I would advise careful choosing – and I am confident our picks will really shine.

Numerous obstacles emerged along the road to harvest. These presented formidable challenges for vignerons, who were compelled to stand watch on the front line, ready to make snap decisions, sometimes taking risks, while maintaining their calm. But at the end of the day, after all the tireless work put in, the satisfaction of making a very fine wine awaited us.

Saint-Émilion

Our first stop in the famous, beautiful village of Saint-Émilion was Château Angélus. I was as impressed with the positivity around the winery as I was with the wines themselves. Describing it as "the unexpected vintage", the Cabernet Franc-dominated blend (again, another record percentage) showed that late picking had paid dividends

At nearby Château Figeac, a new state-of-the-art winery was being put to use for the first time, working with a harvest which had escaped the frost and which will see 100% new oak to complement its soft style. Château Pavie, meanwhile, believes the key to 2021 is "to get the maturity of their Cabernet Sauvignon right".

The limestone plateau at Château Bélair-Monange makes it an ideal spot for their Merlot, which accounts for the vast majority of the blend, whilst the clay and loam of Château Canon accounts for some of the highest percentages of Cabernet Franc. Again, "balance" being the key word – particularly with judicious use of 50% new oak. Both wines are drinking well. Supple and fresh.

Château Troplong-Mondot scorned 2021 as a vintage for "drinkers not speculators", a theme which was continued at leading light Château Cheval Blanc. Here, some plots were harvested more than 65 days after the beginning of the ripening period, which is unusual. Both producers highlighted the contrasts within the growing season -but also the vibrancy and fullness of fruit.

A vintage of extreme and contrasting climatic conditions which required attention at every turn. The resulting wines are full of lovely fresh aromas.

Pessac-Léognan

Closer to the city of Bordeaux, and enjoying much of the same gravelly soils as the Médoc, Pessac-Léognan is producing some excellent, ageworthy wines which deserve a place in any cellar.

For 2021, I was particularly impressed with Château Les Carmes Haut-Brion. The château's proximity to the city centre helps to moderate temperature - so they avoided the worst of that early frost. The wines had fantastic texture and a softness which really stood out.

It would be remiss not to mention Château Haut-Brion too. The only winery from outside the Médoc named in the 1855 classification, their Merlot-dominated style was drinking very nicely – with plenty of opportunity to develop. For those looking for a lighter expression of 2021, I would highly recommend Château La Mission-Haut-Brion which was fresh and ripe and owed much to a light-touch winemaking style with more minimal extraction.

Overall, this is a vintage in Pessac-Léognan which shows how far the skill of winemakers in the region can go to produce excellent wines in challenging conditions.
