Burgundy

Most known for: Pinot Noir and Chardonnay.
Try this if you love: California, Chile or New Zealand reds.

Burgundy is renowned for its prestigious wines produced in the north and easy-drinking wines crafted in the south. Most of Burgundy's production – and the best way to get fantastic value for money – is labelled Bourgogne Rouge and Bourgogne Blanc, which is used for classic, easy-drinking wines made with Pinot Noir and Chardonnay respectively.

Though technically part of Burgundy, Chablis and Beaujolais are essentially their own regions with their own unique personalities. Chablis is known for refreshingly crisp, austere white wines made from Chardonnay whilst Beaujolais is famed for light, soft and fruity reds predominantly using Gamay.

Bordeaux

Most known for: Red blends made with Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Cabernet Franc.

Try this if you love: Reds from South Africa, Australia or even Rioja.

Undoubtedly the world's most famous wine region, Bordeaux has captivated wine drinkers for centuries. It's home to some of the world's most illustrious wine estates and commands some of the highest prices – but great value wines can be found too.

Wine is made in three main styles: white blends from Sauvignon Blanc and Sémillon, Cabernet-dominant blends from the Left Bank and Merlot-dominant blends from the Right Bank. There are now 20 grape varieties permitted for Bordeaux wine, but more than 90% of wines are made with Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot.

Rhône

Most known for: Bold, spicy red blends and rich, aromatic white blends.
Try this if you love: Australian, or other New World Shiraz.

The Mistral wind is vital to winemaking in the South of France, bringing cooler temperatures and reducing the risk of fungal diseases. Bold, meaty Syrah from Hermitage in the north and distinguished, complex red blends from Châteauneuf-du-Pape in the south are two of the most iconic wines of the region – with high prices to match.

Wines labelled Côtes du Rhône make up roughly half of all wines produced, making easy-drinking, food-friendly and far more affordable choices. They're either red blends mostly made with Syrah, Grenache and Mourvèdre or floral and full-bodied white blends made mostly with Grenache Blanc, Viognier and Clairette.

South of France

Most known for: Red blends, rosé and Picpoul.

Try this if you love: A wide range of styles (there's something for everyone).

The Languedoc is a treasure trove for the curious drinker. It's a fantastic region for finding incredible wines – for great value. Wines are mostly blends due to the number of different grape varieties grown. They range from big, rich, full-bodied red blends to crisp and zesty whites like Picpoul. Rosé, sparkling and sweet wines are also produced, so if you're looking for an adventurous sip, the Languedoc is a must-try region.

Alsace

Most known for: Riesling, Pinot Gris and Gewurztraminer

Try this if you love: Washington State or Clare Valley wines, or pairing wines with spicy or Asian cuisines.

An often underrated wine region until properly explored, Alsace may be France's most unique appellation. Its rich heritage intertwines the French and German heritage, due to its geographical position, and as a result, the dual influence blends into one in many aspects.

Long, slender bottles contain famously aromatic wines made with German grapes like Riesling and Gewürztraminer – but in a classic French style. If you're a fan of German Riesling, you can expect the French iteration to be much drier, but just as delicious. And once you delve into Alsace wines, it's hard not to fall in love.

Domaines Schlumberger ‘Spiegel’ Pinot Gris Grand Cru 2020/21, Alsace, 14% 92%
